TRANS-PACIFIC RECORDS

The Oriental Home family, Victoria, 1908 C-07921

INTRODUCTION

British Columbia has been the gateway to the Pacific for hundreds of years. Records of trans-Pacific crossings date back to the 1700s. Indigenous or mixed-race inhabitants from the Pacific Northwest<sup>1</sup> traveled to Asia in the 1840s, and sailors from China and Japan landed in the Pacific Northwest from earliest times. Chinese settlers arrived in the 1850s and were among the original settlers in the unceded territories of the Coast Salish peoples. This research guide provides a brief overview of some of the trans-Pacific holdings of the BC Archives: holdings related to Asia-Pacific Coast relations including migration, immigration and settlement, travel records, transportation, trade and diplomacy.

This guide was produced with the assistance of TransPacific History students from the University of Victoria and their instructor John Price.

PUBLISHED SOURCES

The BC Archives has a significant collection of published material related to trans-Pacific history. It consists of books, pamphlets, journal articles and sometimes theses (which may also be treated as manuscripts—see note under Primary Sources below). These sources are useful in gaining an understanding of historical developments and overall context, as well as in providing leads to further material.

Search the BC Archives Library catalogue using keywords, subjects, names, authors, or titles that you have identified as being of interest to your research. Note that too broad or general a word (e.g., “pacific”) can yield a large number of references, many of which will not be relevant for your purposes. It is a good idea to start with the most specific terms and broaden your search if necessary.

When looking for information about a particular cultural group, check under the name, e.g., “Sikh” or “East Indians”, as well as any geographic locations particularly associated with the community. If you have found relevant citations, look at the subject headings for those references. They may be useful in looking for further material.

Doing a paper for school and have limited time? Look for a book, scholarly article, or thesis on your topic and check the bibliography, especially for journal articles and unpublished material.

The following selected titles are available at the BC Archives Library, but will also be available through most public and university libraries.

- Adachi, Ken. The enemy that never was: a history of the Japanese Canadians. 1976. NW 325.71 A191
- Anderson, Kay. Vancouver's Chinatown: racial discourse in Canada, 1875-1980. 1991. NW 305.8951 A547
- Jagpal, Sarjeet Singh. Becoming Canadians: pioneer Sikhs in their own words. 1994. NW 305.62946 J24
- Roy, Patricia. The Oriental question: consolidating a white man's province, 1914-41. 2003. NW 971.1 R687 2003

<sup>1</sup> The “Pacific Northwest” is loosely defined as that area of North America bounded by the Pacific Ocean on the west and the Rocky Mountains on the east. The northern boundary may or may not include the Yukon and southeast Alaska and the southern boundary northern California. The term is now commonly used to refer to British Columbia, Washington State, and Oregon.

- Roy, Patricia. The triumph of citizenship: the Japanese and Chinese in Canada, 1941-67. 2007. NW 971.1004 R688 2007
- Roy, Patricia. A white man's province: British Columbia politicians and Chinese and Japanese immigrants, 1858-1914. 1989. NW 305.895 R888
- Ward, Peter W. White Canada forever: popular attitudes and public policy toward Orientals in British Columbia, NW 301.4519 W264 1990
- Wickberg, Edgar, ed. From China to Canada: a history of the Chinese community in Canada. 1982. NW 325.71 F931

PRIMARY SOURCES

The majority of the holdings at the BC Archives are unpublished, textual records. They can be government or non-government (sometimes referred to as “private”) records and can be typed as well as handwritten. They are primary sources which you will need to analyse and interpret in order to make them useful to your research.

Note: A number of theses have been catalogued as manuscripts, others as library material. Search both the BC Archives Library and BC Archives Collection if you are looking for a particular thesis.

SEARCH TIPS

There is both a card and an online catalogue for searching records:

- Textual records indexed online (BC Archives Collection) are catalogued as either a government record accession (GR) or a non-government record accession (MS). Many have finding aids attached to their catalogue webpages. Finding aids can be box lists, file lists, volume lists, microfilm reel lists or indexes and should be consulted to help identify specific records.
- The pre-1974 (“Old MS”) card catalogue located within the BC Archives reference room uses alpha-numeric classifications (e.g., E/D/L58) and can be searched by subject, title, and creator. Some of these records have been described and can also be searched online using the BC Archives Collection.

When searching either BC Archives Collection or card catalogues, use a variety of keywords. Some terms used within the catalogues use older spellings or are words which are no longer in contemporary use. The catalogues, online descriptions, and finding aids may also contain words which are not considered appropriate now, but which may be useful as search terms. For example, in addition to standard terms such as “Chinese”, “Japanese”, or “Sikh”, you should also check for references such as “Japs”, “Hindus”, “Hindoos”, “East Indians” or “Orientals”.

Be aware that the BC Archives Collection Search automatically treats multiple keywords as a phrase. Thus, if you wish to search for records relating to Chinese in Vancouver, use the word “and” between the search terms (i.e., “Chinese and Vancouver”). This search will locate any catalogue entries or finding aids that contain both the terms “Chinese” and “Vancouver”. The wild card symbol is ?, and it may be used effectively to search for both singular and plural terms. For example, using the keyword “Jap?” will locate catalogue and finding aid entries that include the words Jap, Japan, Japs, and Japanese.

When using the BC Archives Collection Search, it can also be useful to use the name of the record creator as the search term. This applies whether the creator is an individual or an organization.

Search results will be presented as a list of accessions which have matches to the keywords. Some of the accessions have an attached finding aid, which will provide further information about the accession, and provide microfilm reel numbers, box numbers or a file or item list. Use the finding aid to determine the call number (GR/MS-xxxx) and the number of the box or microfilm reel you need.

For a comprehensive orientation on searching and accessing records via the BC Archives Collection, see the Research Orientation Guide available from our Guides, Indexes, and Inventories webpage and Instructional Films webpage.

ACCESS RESTRICTIONS

The contents of some government records and private records will be restricted for a variety of reasons. For example, government records 100 years old or less are subject to the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act (BC). Check the Notes field of a series' description for access information.

In addition, many records are stored off-site and cannot be made immediately available.

Please speak to staff, email access@royalbcmuseum.bc.ca, or call 250-387-1952 for information about the access status and location of records.

GOVERNMENT TEXTUAL RECORDS

Government records provide a wealth of information on living conditions, demographics, and state perceptions of trans-Pacific peoples as well as many other topics. The following list identifies some of the BC Archives' principal holdings, arranged by relevance to a topic area. It is not an exhaustive list and the finding aids for each accession will need to be consulted in order to locate specific box and file numbers.

Chinatown (Victoria)

- GR-0429 Attorney General correspondence, 1872–1950
- GR-0441 Premier's Records, 1883–1933

SOUND RECORDINGS

Sound recordings include oral histories as well as radio broadcasts. The following are only a sample of recordings likely to have relevance for trans-Pacific research.

Search the BC Archives Collection by keyword. Try variant names and spellings, truncation, and wild cards (e.g., chin?). Filter results by clicking on Advanced Search and selecting "Sound Recording" within the General Material Designation drop-down menu. Filter further by entering a date range.

View the Notes area of a catalogue entry to determine available recording formats (e.g., reference cassette, digital copy, preservation compact disc). Digitized copies are not available online due to file-size limitations. Such recordings can be accessed within the BC Archives Reference Room. Some recordings are held within cold storage for preservation purposes and are restricted.

NEWSPAPERS

Newspapers can be a useful source of local information as well as a source for public response to events and issues. See the BC Newspapers inventory on our Guides, Indexes, and Inventories webpage for a list of newspapers available on microfilm within the BC Archives Reference Room. Many of them are also available online:

- BC Historical Newspapers (1859-1995), for smaller, community-based publications
- British Colonist (1858-1980), which was published in Victoria but included stories from across the province
- Victoria Daily Times (1884-1944)

The Legislative Library of BC also has a unique collection of historical newspapers. See their Guide to Historical Newspaper Holdings.

VERTICAL CLIPPING FILES

The BC Archives' vertical files (ca. 1930-1981) contain newspaper articles and other records about noteworthy individuals or subjects, arranged alphabetically. Files are available on microfilm in the BC Archives Reference Room. Search the Vertical File Index on our Guides, Indexes, and Inventories webpage for standard subject headings such as "Chinese", "Japanese", "Komagata Maru", "Vancouver Race Riots", or individual names.
